Paying Their Own Way

Question: My question has to do with the work-release program for inmates. With the shortage of work available to good citizens in the community, are convicted inmates on rights allowed to return to the community during the day and work for wages that do them no good? The money here goes for their support and yet we have to support their support? Why? Alan Marinale, 4088 North Court SE.

Answer: Joseph Ghim, a consultant on the release program for the Corrections Division of the State Board of Control, explains the philosophy of the program this way:

"The experience a man has while he is a prisoner, we feel, should be rehabilitative.

"Once he is released a part of all criminal offenders will return to the community and the effect they have while in prison are those which they carry with them back to the community. In the act of building up a trust account against the time when he is released."

Ghim explained that the purpose of work-release is not to deny work to the community and to be placed on a job only after full agreement with the employer and only with employers who request a worker. The money earned by the work-release inmate helps pay his personal and living expenses while in the community and support his family. The inmate pays his debts.

George Emdall, corrections division director, said the program is "a boon to the taxpayer" because the convicted pays his way through prison, pays taxes on his earnings and often aids his family, which may be on the welfare rolls.

Ghim said many states and the federal government have passed laws in recent years to provide work-release programs.

As of Aug. 3 a total of 201 men and women had been placed in the program and Ghim termed the effort a complete success in "more than 75 per cent of the cases."

Pour That Concrete

Question: Will the city's new sidewalk policy affect streets which aren't paved or don't have curbs? Pat W. Harvey Jr., 3477 Peak Ave.

Answer: The new policy, adopted by the City Council last year, requires that all streets be paved on all improved streets. (An improved street is one which is paved and has curbs.) Exceptions will be made only where sidewalk construction is not financially feasible because of topography.

The city also requires construction of sidewalks:

- Whenever a street is improved.
- On streets new buildings to be constructed or an old one remodelled if the property abuts an improved street which does not have sidewalks.
- When a subdivision is developed.

Improvements will continue along with the normal. Implementation of the new plan will be scheduled over a 10-year period with the most heavily traveled streets to get sidewalks first.

The Law Doesn't Apply

Question: What can be done under the child labor law about picking beans? Children have gone out on a platform and the farmer has provided no sacks or buckets for them to pick in. The children stand around from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. with nothing to do and they are paid only a few cents. What can be done to force the farmer to pay $1 an hour or something under the circumstances? Mrs. Robert Barren, 2940 State Ave.

Answer: There is neither a federal or state law which covers wages for piece work picking.

State wage and hour laws say no minor under 18 years of age may be employed on a wage basis. There are 60 cents an hour, except in those industries where 18 years of age is not only required to be hired, but also to make league teams with working agreements in place. However, both would demand a halt part in keeping to professional standards.

Pro Baseball for Sale?

Question: Is there any possibility of Salem getting another baseball team if a new park could be built? Dr. W. D. Woodruff, 2002 W. Main St.

Answer: So long as the Northwest League exists, Salem likely always be welcome, according to the league's non-discrimination policy. The city's size, location and professional baseball fan base is not only attractive to the league, but also to major league teams with working agreements in place. However, both would demand a halt part in keeping to professional standards.

Sheriff Needs Radar

Question: Why isn't something being done about traffic congestion on the River Road bridge? It's slowing speed, and others pass me as if they were standing still. Marvin Wolf, 400 W. Main St.

Answer: This area is a speeding problem, Sgt. S. H. Davidson of the Marion County sheriff's office says. He is confident that the area is a problem, but is hindering deputies' traffic enforcement there. Davidson said radar-equipped cars are needed for better traffic control. The cost of the sheriff's patrol cars has a radar unit.

Call for Action cannot answer all of the questions — as much as we'd like to. We will select those questions which are general in nature and if you are sure that your fits that category, but you don't see the answer, don't give up quickly. Getting some of the answers requires more time.

Navigators Movement Bids for Christian Contact

By ALFRED C. JONES
Capital Journal Staff Writer

The Navigators have drafted all the principals met by the President. "We want to have a meeting to discuss the subject of our agreement but we would like to do this through the aid of his steps shall slide."

In 1966 with the late Dawson Tretinman went on a tour of the 200 study disciplines with Navy board members and returned with a national and world model of how to "multisely" discipline his work. The Bill Graham Association has used the Navigators to train people to follow up on their patients in large cities. And many of the members of the 200 study overseas can trace their roots to the Navigators. The Navigators maintain, a say in the lives of the people of the world. The late Larry Harber, who was in the Navy, was in the Navy in the past. Mr. Jardine, who figure in place to raise $100,000 to start Navigators work in seven new places in the Northwest, is an eight other effort.

Many of the members of the 200 study are now in the United States. They are now in the United States. They are now in the United States. They are now in the United States.

The Splendor-Squalor Mix

THE only thing surprising about the outcome of the recall vote in Washington, D.C., this week is that it hasn't happened sooner.

Most Americans probably have a vision of the nation's capital as a city of broad, tree-lined boulevards and fine buildings of marble and glass. Many of the best of the city are teaming with industry - dressed government officials and black ministers.

But there is another Washington, one that is a hell on earth for many of its poor. It spans areas which make up one of the worst Negro ghettos in America.

Few tourists or occasional visitors to the capitol ever venture beyond the parking lot from their hotel rooms to the stately Federal complex, the White House, or the other routine sights. Many even see the rows of shabby bars and strip-tease clubs along 14th Street within three or four blocks from the President's home.

The area where the worst started radiating, just a mile north of the White House, is on the fringe of one of the nation's slums. It is a 1 1/2 x 1 1/2 block stretching for miles in every direction. In it are scores of blocks of two-story brick townhouses with dirt yards covered by trash. Fourteenth Street, in the middle of this ghetto, crawls with garbage, dogs, pushcarts and street prostitutes. It is the seamy core of a city that has lost 120,000 street cars a day in May of this year.

The reasons for Washington's conditions are the same reasons beneath the problems facing every city that has had racial trouble this year - a spreading ghetto of poor Negroes and an inadequate government to cope with the problem.

But Washington has the reasons to the extreme. In 1940 the city was 28 percent Negro and today it is the highest in any American city. In the last 17 years the population of the Washington metropolitan area, including its naturally all-white suburbs in Virginia and Maryland, jumped more than 20 percent. But as the Negro population of Washington increased the suburbs, and the Negro population of Washington increased the suburbs, had an overall gain of less than 1 percent in the same period.

Local governments everywhere are being squeezed. Washington is no exception. The city officials worry about this flight of affluent whites to the suburbs. Washington is an example of how to run not municipal government, and how to cope with problems.

Residents of the nation's capital invariably are taxed without representation. Congress makes their laws and appropriates their money. But D.C. residents have no representative in Congress. They vote only one Presidential elector that right wasn't granted until 1961.

Until just a few years ago appointed officials who answer to the White House and to Congress. The House District Committee is chaired by segregationist John L. McCreary, a former state legislator and ranking Democrat on the committee in the U.S. House of Representatives.

For years proposals have drifted around on Capitol Hill to give Washington's citizens a voice in their local affairs. A referendum was held in 1975. The voters approved of the course, won't go back. The voters in Washington remember that even if the country's responsibility is to get the city out of the same conditions that are behind the ghetto, it is not the city's responsibility. It should be an example of some of the worst conditions in the world.

After years of slow progress that cost 17 dead, Negroes slapped off their rational intransigence that spread through this case. Hardly anyone believed the city would get good. They were bent because of a Communist bear in Havana, Black Power episode. State Communist called on Negroes to disobey all - not yours were on white. Communist said the Vietnam war could give Negro soldiers valuable guerrilla warfare experience that they could use against one they meant to annihilate.

DEAR DR. MOLNER:
 What verifies whether you are a diabetologist? I had my blood sugar tolerance tests. One showed a very high blood sugar and the other very high sugar.
 One doctor said I had diabetes but the other said I didn't. I'm confused. The doctor who said I had diabetes said I had a high blood sugar, and I'm in a quandary. I'm sure I'm a diabetic and also worried because my mother has diabetes and I'm worried that I might have it too.
 I don't know all your symptoms, but the doctor who gave me my sugar test said I was not a diabetic. I have four relatives with the disease. I would agree that you are in the low-to-medium range of blood sugar. In the first test, you got over 200 by the second hour after eating. In the fasting test, the blood sugar was at least 100. The second 15-hour fasting test showed a blood sugar of 100. This is not unusual for potential diabetics to have in vain, such as hanting and -Mrs. A.R.

 Inspecting that insects are creeping or biting is a non-emergency. Since you have emotional or nervous disorders, I would suggest that you consult me on a regular basis. I can help you with the blood sugar and also with the emotional and psychiatric examination.
 If it is commonly said that hypertension is "the opposite of diabetes," but it is not as simple as that. The dynamic of the sugar level and the circumstances under which it rises are so important. The absolute level at any one time is not what matters. It is what you are doing when you are there. If you were my patient, I would not have your symptoms. I do not think you do. You are on any event on the way to developing it. Therefore I agree that you should be on the low-to-medium range of blood sugar. In the first test, you got over 200 by the second hour after eating. In the fasting test, the blood sugar was at least 100. The second 15-hour fasting test showed a blood sugar of 100. This is not unusual for potential diabetics to have in vain, such as hanting and

PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE

We live between the past and the future. The present is the moment that separates the two. It cannot be measured but it can be characterized as the time of tension between them.

-A couple beginning marriage look to the future with hope, their dreams are one of their greatest assets. But they are often unaware of the hold that the past has upon them: differing habits of attitude and action, conflicting systems of values, separate assumptions about the way to raise children. These could destroy their dream of a time of agony.

-A retired person looks forward toward the event of death as the one inescapable reality. Yet the very pressure of this future event may cause his life to be haunted by unrecalled dreams and events that might have been. The present becomes a time of agony.

-A member of a racial minority moves to the city. There he dreams of the day when he might share in the fruits of the world's richest country. However the dream is continually shattered by the long entrenched economic and social political power of the majority groups.

There are many ways in which people react to the tension that comes from the pull of the future against the weight of the past:

-Some become depressed and withdraw from active life.

-Others strike out in anger at the most convenient target.

-Many use the tension as an incentive to change their style of life.

-A few find it to be the key that enables them to be more sympathetic and understanding toward other people.

The person who seeks for the meaning of his life within the heritage of the Christian tradition will experience the tension between past and future in additional ways:

-Bound to a book written two thousand years ago he looks forward to a time when God's will shall "be done on earth as it is in heaven."

-Nurtured by the church which seems to be the last institution to change he asks God to "make all things new."

-Committed to the Christ who seems so very out of date when his knowledge about the world of nature is compared to what men know today, the Christian strives for a Christ who does not have any special skills that give him an advantage over others in handling life's tensions. God does not play that kind of favorites. The Christian does say:

-I accept in joy the life I am given to live.

-I trust that by God's grace I shall live in a way that is pleasing to Him.

-Following the example of Christ I shall seek ways of service that may help remove some of the tensions within the lives of others.

Negro Job Hunt Started

Gov. Tom McCall said Friday that the Department of Employment is making an effort to find jobs for Negroes in Portland.

The effort includes a job training program to get Negroes into the work force. The program is being provided most of the manpower for the Portland districts, Monday and Tuesday.

McCall said in his weekly report to the people on overall Friday that the Negro unemployment rate is 20.9 percent, as compared to 17.5 percent for the white population.

"I am disgraced," he said, "to know that the Portland Chamber of Commerce is just getting started to get Negroes into the work force for the high school area. It is a shame that we are still behind the other district but our people will adjust as necessary."

He said that only 30 percent of the $200,000 he has raised for the Negroes is being used in the white population.

"It provides inspiration and motivation for ourselves but not for the white population," he said. "The decline for reaching the goal is in the white population."

August Trout Hard to Catch

August is not the best month of the year for trout fishing.

Fish, like fishermen, are lazy when the weather's hot.

Trout that will grab anything that moves in the weeks after the ice melts from the surface of a lake get harder to please as the temperature rises.

A good many trout fanciers make their big efforts in the spring and early summer and then chase salmon around the Pacific until September and October.

Unfortunately, not everybody who likes to fish for trout can schedule his vacation at the best time of the year. If you're one of them, don't give up.

Oregon's lakes and streams will produce fish any time of the year if you're willing to put in a little extra effort and don't mind greeting the sun.

The first hour or two after daylight is the best time to catch a big rainbow or eastern brook as he cruises near the shore in search of food. Just before dark is good, too, especially if you can handle a fry rod and have a fly that matches the current hatch.

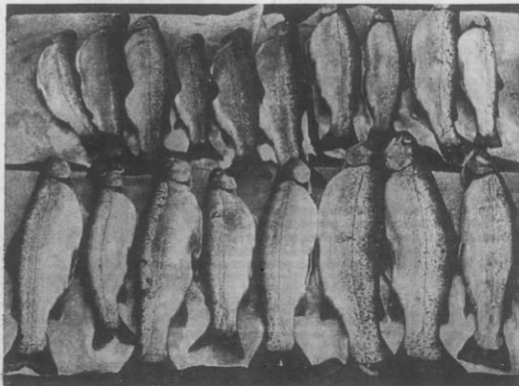

In the middle of the day, your best bet is to sleep or show your family the sights. The fish will be too busy keeping cool to bother with anything you can give them.

My favorite lure for the early and late fishing is an F-5 flatfish in a frog, silver scale or red and white pattern. If the water's clear and not very deep, tie the lure onto a leader 4 to 6 feet long and pull it slowly through the water with a fly rod or spinning pole.

If the water's dark with algae or if the fish are deep, you may have to use some large spinners — like a Ford fender — to attract the fish. If you use large spoons, put the lure a full 6 feet from them. Anything less is a waste of time, even if it sounds a little extreme.

Every Square Foot Used to Advantage

Here is an excellent example of good economy and planning. Where every square foot has been used to advantage and the floor plan has been arranged for easy and convenient family living.

The home is closely associated with the outdoors and very much a part of its setting. Sliding doors open from both the family and living rooms to the wide patio.

Note the ease with which you can move to all parts of the house from the impressive center hall entry. A guest closet opens to this entry while furnace and broom closets open to the short hall that connects the bedroom wing with the kitchen. A partial wall separates this hall from the living room. Such an arrangement guarantees that the hall will be well lighted from the living room and visually increases the size of the hall and rooms.

Two bedrooms and a bath are in one wing. The third bedroom — or den — is on the opposite side of the house where it could be used as an office or after a member of the family — or a guest — moves privacy. This room has both a wide wardrobe and a storage closet. This closet will eliminate the need for a chest of drawers. A three-quarter bath is accessible from this room as well as from the service-kitchen area. Both baths feature pullman lavatories.

Laundry facilities with overhead cabinets and a water heater are in the service. An entire wall in this room can be used for storage or additional built-ins.

The kitchen and family room have been combined into one generous size room. Only cabinets, including an eating bar, separate the two areas. The family room can be entered from either the kitchen or living room.

The front facade is softened by the jog of the den wing. Plans for a double garage are furnished with the house plans.

Buyer Receives No Guarantees On Used House

By BERNARD C. MELTZER
Register and Tribune Syndicate

What warranties or guarantees, if any, does one receive when he buys a used house? The answer really is very few or none, unless the buyer takes certain steps for his protection.

Dear Mr. Meltzer:

Just less than one year's time, my dream house has become my nightmare. The house I bought was only 8 years old. But, as of now, the following things are wrong: the joists are full of termites, the heater is defective, the roof leaks, and the fuses blow continually, to name a few.

When I bought, I was told the house was insulated; I can't find any. My complaints to the former owner and to the agent go unanswered. I've spoken to attorneys, have researched almost every book on the subject and have spoken to agents and bankers. Almost all tell me that when you buy a used house, you are buying in "as is" condition, and the buyer is assuming the risk.

Let me ask a frank question: Suppose you personally were buying a used house. How would you protect yourself?—Mr. F. G.

ANSWER: The doctrine that a buyer of a used house buys in "as is" condition has been modified from its previous unassailable position. But it's still loaded, under ordinary circumstances, against the purchaser.

The implied guarantee or warranty and therefore, the protection, varies from state to state. In general, all that a buyer gets is the understanding that the house is usable and that the seller did not deliberately hide from the buyer that information which the inspection of an ordinarily prudent person would reveal.

The question as to how a buyer can be protected is most interesting and should be revealing to readers. The reason that a buyer ordinarily gets almost no protection is that the agreement is usually prepared by the seller's agent or attorney. Therefore, the ordinary process of buying is somewhat weighed against the purchaser.

The buyer can obtain protection, and the following is not unreasonable, by insisting that the agreement of sale contain such warranties on the part of the seller as: that the house is termite-free, the heating system is working properly, the roof is in good condition, the electric wiring is adequate. If the house is in the country, there should be a warranty relating to palatable water, and a functioning sewerage system.

If, for example, he owner or agent told you that the house was insulated, then the agreement of sale should thusly warrant. In fact, warranties as to all important parts of the house can be included in the agreement. If an owner balks, then the buyer should properly ask himself: "What's wrong?"

The above is an easy method for a buyer to obtain necessary protection, but unfortunately, is very seldom used — most of the time, because the buyer has no knowledgeable person exclusively protecting his interests. Also, these warranties are not usually found on the standard printed agreement of sale forms.

Dear Mr. Meltzer:

I'm only 11 years old, but is that any reason why I should be discriminated against because of age? My parents require that I sleep in the same bedroom with my 7-year-old brother. I don't like it, I watch TV, and I read the newspapers.

Yesterday, some fellow stated on the evening program that it was illegal to force a person to sleep in a room with anybody else — especially one he doesn't like. How do I go about reporting my parents?—C. A.

ANSWER: When I was a youngster, four of us children slept in the same room. When we had visitors, my parents would pile several more children in with us. The experience hasn't scarred me, but we sure had a lot of fun.

Things have changed considerably — parents today like to have each child with his own bedroom. But I don't know of any parent who's sitting in jail because he hasn't provided this.

The TV commentator was either joking, or talking about something else.

Instead of reporting your parents, how about reporting to deliver newspapers — they could use a youngster with your spirit. After a couple of years, you might save enough money to buy your own bedroom.

Dear Mr. Meltzer:

In the post-Revolutionary War period my ancestors crossed the Allegheny Mountains and settled in the Ohio River valley. I remember as a child visiting my grandparents and being told that at one time the family owned over 1,000 acres.

My question is, "How did the family acquire the land?" Did they buy it from the Indians? I have never been able to find any evidence of a purchase among the family papers.

ANSWER: A good portion of the land west of the Alleghenies was simply taken. Settlers would stake out a parcel, enclose it, farm it and with the passage of time would obtain title by "adverse possession." In some instances, title was obtained by means of grants from either the federal, state or territorial government. As far as settlers buying land from Indians, this was unknown.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into correspondence with those who will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his columns.

Using Pesticide? Take Care Not To Create Hazards

Follow all safety precautions recommended on the label when using pesticides. Store this material and dispose of empty containers so they are not a hazard to man and animals and especially to children. Do not contaminate streams, ponds or other water sources. Garden vegetables express their need for fertilizer through hunger signs. Usually, plant growth has slowed down before these symptoms become apparent. Yellowed or lighter green leaves, especially on the lower part of the plant indicate a nitrogen deficiency. Tomatoes are particularly sensitive. Plants exposed to prolonged cold weather can also turn purple. Potassium deficiency usually shows up as a yellowing or browning of the edges of the older leaves. The typical hunger signs from most nutrient elements differ among vegetables. A brown deficiency causes dry rot or brown fringed of beets, cracked stalks of celery, hollow stem of cauliflower and discolored areas on cauliflower heads.

If a garden site has been selected carefully, with attention to soil type, drainage, natural organic matter, plant foods and soil conditioning, a complete and adequate fertilizer program and only soil testing needed is for acidity or alkalinity. Once the initial amount of lime has been added to adjust the soil, further testing should not be necessary for four or five years.

I was reminded the other day of a friend I met at the Portland convention of the American Rose Society a few years back. He is Robert Lindquist, well known rose hybridizer from Hemet, Calif. He was in Portland for the convention and Rose Festival and while there I had the chance of a interview with him.

He is, today, America's youngest rose hybridizer with several All-Americans and other popular varieties to his credit. Every cross he produces has a voluminous record of its parent.

The rose that reminded me of him is one of his latest creations, "Ole" (pronounced oh-lay). It received the name by coincidence. A short time before naming it he drove to Tijuana, Mexico, to see a bull fight. Never having seen one he was impressed by the pageantry and especially the color of the matadors. He returned home to the box of officials and the seniors all tossed roses to him with the one word "Ole!" The two seemed to go together and, thus, his red rose for that year was named "Ole." We have it in our garden, a rather light red, bright and in full bloom somewhat resembling a double poppy.

Ferns are such a complicated group of plants that few botanists profess any concrete knowledge of them and there certainly is a dearth of writings on the subject. However, we learn that one of the earliest botanists who attempted to acquaint himself and the rest of the world with this large group of plants was Martin Martens. Born in the Netherlands in 1791, educated at the University of Liege where he received the degree of Doctor of Science in physics and mathematics, he became professor of chemistry and botany in Maastricht, Netherlands. In 1837 he published a book on the hybrids of ferns. In 1842 he, with H. Galleani, published a new work on the ferns of Mexico. Galleani made scientific trips to Mexico and his collection of ferns are found in 20 more European herbaria. In 1846 he, with Galleani, published in the Field Museum, the Gray Herbarium and the New York Botanical Garden. He later published several papers, botanical studies and geological papers on Mexico.

Developed at the U.S. National Arboretum were four new cultivars of Lagerstroemia (Crape Myrtle), those plants that are to Southern gardens what lilacs are to those in the North. These are "Catawba," "Conestoga," "Polomac" and "Powhatan." All are free-flowering types and resistant to powdery mildew.

According to a recent study made by Washington State University, the Columbia River drainage area is considered to be near ideal for growing top quality potatoes. We recall many years ago, upon a trip to Walla Walla from Pendleton, being impressed by the quantity and quality of onions raised along the route. On a more recent trip to Walla Walla over the same route, the same areas formerly planted to potatoes and onions were then supporting a good stand of wheat, except for some evidences of rust infection. This area is further versatile in that it produces very fine melons, when irrigation is available.

Visitors to the Park of Roses in Columbus, Ohio, this year will see on display 22 new rose varieties. The American Rose Society has begun to develop an outdoor test and display garden at the park. Beginning this year, each nursery registering a new rose has been asked to submit ten plants to the test garden. They will remain on trial for two consecutive years. Presently the park contains 25,000 roses of 450 varieties.

One of the principal purposes in pruning trees and large shrubs is to open up vistas and prevent them from destroying their original pattern. At the same time proper pruning lets in air and light.

If you plant a large shade tree near your house, place it so that it provides shade for the house during the hot time of day in the summer.

By MARK TAYLOR

Capitol Journal Garden Writer

Q. We have a number of shade trees on our place and wonder if there is one spray that we can use on all of them, because each pest seems to have its own chemical control. C.B.

A. For an insecticide, DDT would be the best to have on hand, but do not use it on elm trees. For a general purpose fungicide a spray of micronized copper would be best.

Q. I like peonies at blooming time but they are soon gone and you have nothing but foliage left. Is it all right to cut that foliage back? Mrs. C.O.L. A. No, under no circumstances should you cut off the foliage of peonies until after the plant has gone completely dormant for while you keep the leaves alive the roots are still growing and accumulating strength for next year's display. They are dormant when the foliage has turned brown.

Q. Can you tell me what is causing my rhododendron leaves to turn brown and drop off? Mrs. M. W.

A. This appears to be a nutrient deficiency — too much lime, which you will find near to the concrete foundation of a house and, possibly sunburn. Try moving the affected plants away from the house and give them a semi- shady location — be sure to water well.

Q. What can we do to control aphids on our trees when the adjoining neighbors do not attempt to control them on theirs? Mrs. L. R.

A. The problem you have with aphids on your trees is very real. The sticky substance they cause to fall can permit a foothold by certain fungus diseases which can be more destructive than the aphid. Explain this to your neighbor adding that if you both take care of the aphids in the trees you will both gain from it by getting better protection from the insects and less chance of disease. This is a real problem in cities where cars, parked at the curb become covered with this sticky stuff that is very difficult to remove.

Q. We have two long rows of strawberries but nearly no crop. Can you tell me why? D.O.

A. Frequently strawberries take two years to get well enough established to bear a crop. Be sure they are in raised beds or ridges and are soaked at least two feet deep when watered. In the home garden, feed them monthly with a complete plant food, not just one element. Be sure that the plant food is on the acid side.

Q. I can't get my ivy geranium to blossom. During the winter I watered them just enough to keep them alive, but they showed no sign of blooming. Mrs. W. E.

A. Ivy geraniums should not dry out. They will need very strong light in the house in winter. Outside they should be planted in full sun in a warm spot.

Q. I read in your column that there are dwarf perennial varieties developed by the late L. R. Briethaupt, of Oregon State University. Where can they be purchased? Mrs. L. S.

A. While we do not make a practice of recommending any dealer or nursery, in this case the dwarf perennial asters, not setting viable seed, have not been too widely grown, since plants must be propagated from cuttings. My friend, the late Professor Briethaupt, licensed some dealers to sell plants. Oregon growers that I know of are Walker Marx Gardens, Boring, and the Swan Island Dahlias, Aurora. You could probably order through your local nursery, too. These attractive flowers come in all colors. The last creation of Prof. Briethaupt, before his death, was a clear, beautiful white.

Q. My gooseberry bushes have lost most of their leaves and a web-like silk thread runs through the branches. What causes this? H. M.

A. Spray the bushes with a good fungicide. Spider mites could also cause this. They can be discouraged by spraying the bushes frequently with the hose.

East Is China, And West is U.S.

Hairy Dreams

Arlie Holt, director of Pentacle Theatre's production "Anastasia," which opens tonight at 8:15, wears a hair piece used in the play by Charles Hinkle who plays the sleigh driver. Holt, an actor himself, admits he'd like to play a "hairy" role someday—perhaps Rastaputin, the mad monk. (Capital Journal Photo by Darrel Church.)

THE CHINESE LOOKING GLASS by Dennis Bloodworth (Farrar, Straus and Giroux). Explains China and the Chinese in an amusing and simple manner and may well frighten the reader for years.

For the book clearly documents that East is China and West is America and never the twain shall meet except in deadly peril.

Author Bloodworth, one of the best British journalists in Asia, goes far beyond the chop suey school of Sinoology which believes the Chinese are a mindless mass who eat thousand-year-old eggs, make good laundrymen and attack only in human waves.

But he does show that the Chinese really do believe Americans are foreign devils, along with British, Russians, Canadians, Germans, Poles, Egyptians, Indians, Peruvians, Serbians, Malaysians, Japanese and any other non-Chinese. Bloodworth explains with rollicking anecdotes that the Chinese businessman will cheat, the Chinese general will stoop to treachery to conquer, the Chinese man will be only his brother's keeper and let the nine dragons have non-kin.

He clearly shows that Chinese and non-Chinese do not understand one another and that when the Communist rulers of Peking have inter-continental ballistic missiles—and the Pentagon predicts the time is only five years or so away—we had better watch out.

China, after all, is at home with catastrophe. Time is a'd again disease, war and Hitler-like rulers have killed tens of millions of Chinese but the Middle Kingdom goes marching on. It is all very frightening. But Bloodworth's is nonetheless an amusing doomsday book.

He describes the terror number-one wife strikes in the heart of a good Chinese husband. He describes just what kind of puppy dog the Chinese find finer than caviar. He describes in the materialist Westerner just why, to a Chinese, the important thing is not what something or someone is but what something or someone appears to be. Bloodworth also reminds us of China's greatness—her dandies were using anti-mosquito powder while Europeans were barely out of the trees. They beat the Germans to printing by 90 years. Picking up their chopsticks they cannot understand why we insist on using kitchen utensils at the dining room table.

Bloodworth describes the games Chinese people play with sex. His essays on the Viennese physician who came to China to see if acupuncture medicine for a cure on the bloody Boxer Rebellion, on eunuchs and other rascals make the unpalatable pill of China easy to swallow. Bloodworth's message is don't tread on the Chinese, stay out of their way and then, maybe, East may be nice to West.

Israel Issues Victory Set

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

As a tribute to its lightning-quick triumph in the Middle East War, Israel has just issued a special set of three new stamps honoring the Israeli Defense Forces.

The 15 ageret shows the emblem of Israel's Defense Forces — a sword, an olive branch and the Star of David. The 40 ageret depicts Israeli ships in the Straits of Tiran, symbolizing the freedom of navigation. The 80 ageret illustrates the Walling Wall, now accessible to all of its people in a reunified Jerusalem.

This special set of stamps is printed in multicolor by photogravure, reports I. E. Israel Philatelic Agency in America. They are available at stamp dealers throughout the country. The Agency also advises that the two sets of stamps originally scheduled at this time — International Tourist Year and Esperanto — have been postponed.

Great Britain honors its new hero, Sir Francis Chichester, with a new 1 shilling 9 pence stamp. Featured on the adhesive is the kech Gypsy Moth IV which Sir Francis navigated around the globe all by himself. He is shown as a tiny figure near the forecast.

The summer issue of the quarterly Minkus Stamp Journal features an interesting article in the National Philatelic Stamp Collection in the Smithsonian Institution. It is written by the man entrusted with its care, Dr. Scheele, assistant curator. The story traces the growth of the collection from modest beginnings of a few thousand stamps in 1888 to its new home in the recently completed Museum of History and Technology in Washington.

Other articles of note tell about London as a "Stamp Mecca," the effect of the Middle East War on Israel's postal activities and many stories behind the stamps.

The 1968 edition of the famous Harris U.S. BNA Catalog has just been placed on the market.

It contains nearly 3,500 price revisions with notable increases in numerous sections. Featuring stamps of the 111 states of the United States, United Nations and British North America, the new edition consists of 192 pages with more than 2,000 identifying illustrations. Extra-heavy plastic-coated covers are also new for this edition.

Included is an "American" section, specialty section and the invaluable U.S. Stamp Identifier which enables the collector to distinguish between rare stamps and their common "look-alike" counterparts.

Priced at $1 and mailed post free anywhere in the world, the 1968 U.S. BNA Catalog is available directly from H. E. Harris Co., Box A, Boston, Mass. 02117.

Visitors to the United States Pavilion at Expo '67 in Montreal can buy a variety of stamps at a booth near the exit. Stamps available range from the John F. Kennedy memorial stamp of 1964 to the Canada Centennial commemorative issued this year. A packet of an assortment of commemorative stamps is being sold for $1.25.

Scandinavian Festival Set

You don't have to be Swedish, Finnish, Danish or Norwegian to enjoy the Scandinavian Festival which runs Aug. 10-13 at Junction City.

The Lane County area is liberally sprinkled with settlers of Scandinavian extraction. The festival gives them a chance to pay homage to their heritage, at the same time providing visitors with a wonderful show.

Included in the four-day show are concerts, folk dancing, stage shows and bus tours. Faculty of all kinds, representing each of the Scandinavian countries, is offered for sale.

Souvenir hunters can also have a field day. The streets of Junction City are blocked off for the fête, and small specialty shops are installed. Candles, waxes and products and other items are offered for sale.

Each day of the festival is dedicated to a particular country. Swedish Day marks the opening Aug. 10. Following in order are Finnish, Norwegian, and Danish days.

The entire program is long and varied. Full programs and schedules for visitors will be available at the information booths along the festival mall.

Festival officials boast that the "Scandinavian Festival, is not a come and see thing, but a come and DO affair." Participation in festival events by visitors is highly encouraged.

The attractions are almost unlimited. There is something to see and do for everyone from early morning to late at night.

Activities begin each day with a 6 a.m., breakfast in Scandia Hall. Events then continue throughout the day. Junction City is 13 miles north of Eugene on U.S. 99. Access roads from Interstate 5 at the Harrisburg or Halsey turnoffs lead to the city. Oregon 36 from the coast also leads directly to the festival.

Catch That Hare

Folks who enjoy a Subday drive in the country may want to try their hand at a Hare and Hound Rally staged by Williams Motor Club of Salem.

The rally is slated Sunday at Dental's Automotive Supply on Market Street near Interstate 5. The entry fee is $2.50 per car. Registration begins at 1 p.m., and the first car will set out on the course at 2:31.

The rallymaster, Len St. Lawrence, is said that the event is designed for fun. Although rallying is traditionally a sport for sports car drivers, this event is open to anyone who wishes to enter.

No previous rallying experience is necessary. Each driver, however, must have a valid license in order to enter. The entire affair will be run at speeds well within stipulated limits, and police will be informed of the rally route. Anyone cited for a traffic violation during the rally is automatically disqualified. The course will be marked by lime - bags dropped by the "hare." The "hounds" will follow at intervals, trying to determine the course by counting the bags.

Other "gimmicks" will also be included. Contestants will be asked to answer questions about what they have seen on the route and will be required to leave their cars at certain points to gather information for the answers.

The route will cover mostly paved roads near the Salem area. The entire event will take less than three hours.

ROME (AP) — Two bright-eyed British teen-agers, picked for a youth-recreated version of "Romeo and Juliet," are racing through the feverish fields and the dark clumps of Tuscany.

Leonard Whiting and Olivia Hussey have had little movie experience.

"It's a tremendous risk," says Italian Director Franco Zeffirelli, whose "Taming of the Shrew" starred Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton.

"We just hope to have the right chemistry—a melancholy Romeo who rebels like all the youth of today and a pure, determined Juliet. If we fail, it will be ridiculous."

Zeffirelli has been directing Shakespearean plays for seven years in London, Rome and New York.

"But this will be my last," he maintains. "These two little actors should crown my seven years with the Bard."

Argentine-born Olivia comes straight from a London stage role to the rolling hills of Tuscany, the Italian province where the ancient Etruscan civilization blossomed.

British 'Little Pictures' Are Winners From Winner

LONDON (AP) — The vigor of the English film has resulted from development of what has been called, for lack of a better term, the "little picture."

This is not to be confused with the B picture, which Hol-

Leonard has just finished an 18-month stint as the Artful Dodger in the English musical hit "Oliver."

Zeffirelli has put both through a get-acquainted-with-Italy period, to capture the spirit of the Italian stories which inspired Shakespeare to write the play.

Shakespeare specifically meant the parts to be for adolescents and not for oldies like Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard, who did the movie in 1936, Zeffirelli says.

Around Tuscany, a tiny village perched on a poppy-dotted bluff, Whiting is taking fencing and riding lessons while Miss Hussey practices song and dance.

Both are closely checked by a chaperon, Miss Elsie Mayfair, contracted to watch the teen-agers' weight in the face of starchily Italian meals and to keep track of their social life.

Zeffirelli will cut some of the long passages from Shakespeare's play but will retain the basic dialogue.

The film, produced by Dino de Laurentis, will be released in early 1968.

lywood ground out like sausage to fill the lower half of double bills during the big-studio era. Scarcely ever was a B picture something with quality.

The British development is invested else. It is also made for little money, usually less than a million dollars, sometimes small that amount. The leading players are often little known.

The subject matter is often daring or far out, and the direction and performances display imagination and an adherence to reality. The increasingly sophisticated film audiences of Britain and America have provided big profits for the little pictures that succeed. Having been stung by foreign-made epics that scarcely broke even, American film companies are investing in more and more little pictures.

Universal believes that Michael Winner is just what his name implies. The company backed the young producer-director in "The Jokers," about two brothers who try to steal the crown jewels from the Tower of London. The film was a hit, and Winner followed with "I'll Never Forget What's Name," with Orson Welles and a British cast.

Winner has strong views about studios.

"They're a thing of the past, absolutely worthless," says he. "Oh, perhaps you might build sets for historical interiors that you couldn't find elsewhere. Otherwise it is pointless to shoot scenes against cardboard backgrounds. Such rubbish."

NETS FOR HIPPIES
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—City Health Director Elin Sore clamped down on the bearded and long-haired hippie set Thursday during a hearing on sanitary conditions at restaurants in the Haight-Ashbury District.

He said a current law requiring women to wear hair nets when preparing food would be enforced "irrespective to the sex of the individual."

Slippery Sawbones Cuts His Way Into Afternoon TV

By JOHN TERRY, Capital Journal Reporter
Dr. Richard Kimble will pack up his canned malpractice and his into daytime re-runs after a two-part episode Aug. 22 and 29.

"The Fugitive," which stars Richard Janssen as a physician on the flee (he was a surgeon before he cut out), has been running (if you don't like puns, turn to the real estate column) on ABC for four years.

The show's premise, as you well know, is that Kimble stands wrongly convicted of uxoricide in the first degree. Kimble knows he's not guilty of uxoricide because he can't even spell it, although he's a whiz at "i e u o l y m p h o s a r c o m a ." (If you don't like big words, turn to the real estate column.)

At any rate, Kimble wants nothing more than to be exonerated of uxoricide. His tactic is to go gathering willy nilly around the country looking for a mysterious character with the same name. This offers endless scrapes with the law and plot possibilities ad infinitum et ad nauseum.

It will all come to an end Aug. 22 and 29, however. The two-part episode will make, according to ABC, "the closely guarded secret public knowledge."

I don't know what "the closely guarded secret" is, and ABC isn't saying. I do know it's inexcusable for them to spend two hours unwinding the series. I could have written a script for them that would have done it in 15 seconds flat including time out for two commercials.

I suppose everything will turn out peachy-keen for Dr. Kimble. He'll probably end up quietly keeping some posh suburb in pills and stitches while those that done him wrong will be justly punished.

There may even be the makings of a whole new series here. ABC could arrange for the guys that really killed Kimble's wife to escape. Then Kimble could do the chasing for a while.

They could call it "The Chaser" — to be taken directly after every shot.

From Vietnam comes the following from the 4th Division's newspaper, the Ivy Leaf, about Sailemte Bob Mason who broadcasts via tape recordings at 5:55 p.m. weekdays on radio station KBZY:

VUNG DA TAM — "Papa's got a brand new bag! 'Hey, executive, did you bring your secretary with you?'"

The man with the smart looking Samsonite briefcase just laughs. He's getting used to it by now.

Each time the 4th Infantry Division's 1st Battalion, 22nd Infantry moves, Private First Class Robert Mason loads himself down with a helmet, rifle, web gear, ammunition and a full pack just like his buddies. But the attacks he carries at his side would look more at home on a '707' than a Huey helicopter.

"It might not look it, but it's practical!" commented Pfc Mason. "I bought it just before I came over to keep my camera and tape recorder in. The case will keep them from getting broken."

His explanation doesn't stop the kidding though. A hand reaches out to help him aboard the chopper, and a voice shouts above the turbine roar, "Welcome aboard the commuter special."

One feature of Ashland's Shakespearean festival is a marionette show which is strictly not for the kids. As a matter of fact, nobody under 12 years is allowed in, for some reason.

This is Peter Arrault's fifth season at the festival. He stages marionette performances of "Medea" — "Dr. Faustus" — manipulating all the characters and doing all the voices from memory himself.

And I can't even work a yo-yo without getting the string tangled.

Pentacle Theatre's production of "Anastasia" opens at 8:15 p.m. today. I'd suggest you arrive about 8:13 and occupy two minutes by humming the last 32 bars of Tchaikovsky's "March Slav" quietly to yourself.

That way you'll be in the mood and the show can start on time.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The concluding two episodes of ABC's "The Fugitive" series will be on the network Aug. 22 and 29, revealing the outcome of hero Dr. Richard Kimble's four years of dodging the law as a convicted wife-killer who knows he is innocent. The network held out these episodes, which normally would have wound up the season in the spring before summer re-runs began, to maintain interest in the series as long as possible. The program will be on the air in the fall except on a re-run basis, which probably will continue for years.

Charlton Heston will be the Lord Enos in the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" production of Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth the Queen" on NBC during the new season. Judith Anderson has the title role.
